

Neil Hare

Neil Hare is vice president of Corporate Communications at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the world's largest business federation representing more than 3 million companies. In this capacity he manages a team of writers, graphic artists, Web designers, and photographers who keep Chamber members informed of lobbying efforts on their behalf and membership benefits. The group produces a variety of publications including uschamber.com, a monthly publication with a circulation of 250,000, and uschamber.com weekly, an e-mail newsletter, and maintains a vast, interactive Web site for small businesses that receives more than 350,000 visitors per month.

Previously, Mr. Hare served as vice president of the National Chamber Foundation, the Chamber's educational research arm, where he oversaw public policy events and publications.

Before joining the Chamber, Mr. Hare was the content director of USLaw.com, the nation's leading Web site offering legal information and services to consumers and small businesses.

Mr. Hare, an attorney, also worked in a Washington, D.C., law firm, specializing in litigation, and as a legal editor for the Bureau of National Affairs (BNA), covering America's securities markets. He appeared regularly on CNBC, MSNBC, and FoxNews as an expert on day trading and wrote columns on securities regulations for financial publications.

Mr. Hare received a J.D. from American University's Washington College of Law in 1995; a diploma in European law from Nanterre University, Paris, France, in 1994; and a B.A. in international relations from Tufts University in 1991. He is a member of the New York Bar and the District of Columbia Bar and is on the board of directors of D.C. Scores, a nonprofit organization that provides after-school writing and soccer programs to elementary school children in Washington, D.C.
